

Healthy Matters™: Leading Through the 7 Critical Needs™

Walt Brown, EOS Worldwide Head Coach • Cliff Notes for Attract or Repel • The 7 Critical Needs that activate trust, engagement, and accountability

1 • LET'S JUST TELL THE TRUTH

You didn't start your company just to make money. You believed in something. Then politics creep in, standards soften, energy drains, tough conversations get avoided.

- Organizations do not drift toward clarity. They drift toward entropy and dysfunction.
- If you do not measure Organizational Health and act through your Business Operating System, you end up managing decay.
- Healthy outperforms smart. The difference now: Healthy can be measured and the response systemized.

2 • THE EFFORT ARROWS

Relative effort from each side. The load shifts toward the individual down the list.

3 • LEADERS MOVE FIRST

Every need carries two Effort Arrows:

- Organization's Effort → clearly communicate and support each individual with strong systems.
- Individual's Effort ← understand and align with the organization's effort.

Healthy culture begins when leadership moves first. Leaders increase clarity, integrity, and courage → ← people respond with trust and ownership.

Wait for employees to "step up" first and the arrows collapse: confusion, dysfunction, fear. But not all the load is on leaders. You cannot make someone be heard; you can only be clear about how the organization listens. The rest is on the individual.

CRITICAL NEED • THE QUESTION	ORGANIZATION'S EFFORT →	← INDIVIDUAL'S EFFORT	BOTTOM LINE
1 To Belong "Do I fit here?" A two-way promise	• Clear core values, concrete behaviors tied to values • Consistent standards • Courageous enforcement	• Own the core values • Protect the cultural standards	Tolerate misalignment from a rockstar and you teach everyone your values are negotiable. Belonging is a sacred bond. Treat it that way.
2 To Believe "Do I trust and buy in to where we're going?" Vision requires consistency	• Clear direction • Transparent reasoning • Steady priorities	• Commit to understanding the plan • See yourself in the plan • Take initiative, make an effort	People cannot give themselves fully to ambiguity. When belief fades, cynicism grows, and cynicism is corrosive. Guard belief carefully.
3 To Be Accountable "Do I own something that matters?" Clarity is honor	• Clear Seat and Role definition and ownership • Honest feedback • Consistent reinforcement and follow-through	• Take ownership; be responsible • Challenge and look for ways to improve • Earn self-confidence; win as a team	Vague accountability breeds fear and politics. Clear accountability increases dignity, confidence, and honor, not just performance.
4 To Be Measured "How do I know if I'm winning?" Truth is liberating	• Visible metrics tied to Seats and Roles • Consistent review • Clear standards	• Own your numbers • Challenge and look for ways to improve • Earn pride; win as a team member	Metrics are not about pressure. They are about truth. Truth removes guessing and hidden agendas and builds trust. Handled with integrity, it liberates people.
5 To Be Heard "Does my voice matter?" Listening is respect	• Structured conversations • Real issue resolution • Promote psychological safety and team trust	• Honest contribution • Commitment, not compliance • "Go verbal": lean in, speak up	Listening is not weakness. Healthy organizations create disciplined spaces for disagreement. Heard people align; silenced people divide.
6 To Be Developed "Am I growing here?" Growth is stewardship	• Create and communicate development mechanisms and expectations • Training is only one part of development • Stick to an intentional development rhythm	• Understand the company's development mechanisms • Lean in, participate in the pulse • Be honest about your development wants and needs	People are designed to grow. Stop developing them and they will find growth elsewhere. Development is not optional. It is stewardship.
7 To Be Balanced "Can I sustain this pace without losing myself?" Endurance is performance	• Honest communication of time commitment • Systems for sustainable pacing • Respect and systems for limits	• Self-honesty about the job's work-life balance • Self-honesty about compensation and benefits • Courage for the hard conversation about whether the job meets your needs	Burnout is not a badge of honor. It is mismanagement of human energy. Endurance supports lasting performance. Frenzy destroys it.

4 • MEASURE THE TRUTH

What gets measured gets done. Inspect what you expect.

- Anonymous survey, one set of questions per need, scored 1–10 (next two pages).
- Boils down to one number, your BITE Index™ (like an NPS): Buy-In, Inclusion, Trust, Engagement.
- Not condemnation. Information. And information supports adjustment.
- It is your BOS audit: are we using our tools to meet each need, and is a tool missing?

5 • DON'T JUST MEASURE IT, SYSTEMIZE IT: THE TOOLS MAP™

Truth without a way to respond leads to frustration. Whatever BOS you run, you need tools, not inspiration. The Tools Map is Step 2 of your truth audit: map the 7 Critical Needs against your EOS® tools (next page). When a need scores low, ask: Do we have a tool inside our BOS designed to address this, and are we using it?

- Low Belonging? → Are our core values clear and enforced?
- Low Accountability? → Are Roles defined and visible?
- Low Measurement? → Are Scorecards meaningful and reviewed consistently?
- Low Being Heard? → Are meetings structured for real issue resolution?

Without tools, effort depends on personality. With tools, it becomes systemic. Inspiration fades. Systems endure.

6 • COURAGE AND PATIENCE

- Courage to enforce standards. Patience to build slowly.
- Courage to remove misalignment. Patience to let culture compound.
- Health is not built in quarters. It is built in seasons: repeated cycles of clarity, action, and reinforcement.

Final Word

You are shaping an environment where people spend a third of their waking lives. That is a sacred responsibility. Strengthen your side of the arrows → and your people will respond ←. Attract the right people. Repel the wrong ones. Healthy Matters.

The Tools Map™: 7 Critical Needs to the EOS® Tools

Your BOS tools exist to make the Organization's Effort Arrow consistent. The map shows which EOS tools carry each need.

THE SURVEY IS YOUR BOS AUDIT

The 7 Critical Needs Survey is a Business Operating System diagnostic. It answers two questions: How well are we using the tools to meet each critical need? and Does our operating system have a tool to meet the need? Your BITE Index™ is the measurement of implementation effectiveness and operating system completeness.

- If Belief scores low, maybe your strategic clarity needs work. What tool?
- If Accountability scores low, maybe your role definition is unclear. What tool?
- If Being Heard scores low, maybe your meeting structure is weak. What tool?

HOW TO USE THIS PAGE

- Step 1: Run the survey (next two pages). Identify the need that is not being widely met.
- Step 2: Read down that need's column. Those are the tools designed to address it.
- Step 3: For each checked tool, ask: Do we have it? Do we use it consistently? Is it being used effectively? Circle the gaps.
- Step 4: Use the tool to strengthen the Organization's Effort Arrow →.

Without tools, effort depends on personality. With tools, effort becomes systemic. That is the difference between occasional alignment and structural alignment.

Scores are for each statement. Written feedback is optional, but we strongly encourage you to explain your scores. Your explanations allow us to have the clearest idea of what’s working and not working so that we can come up with a tailored plan to make the organization stronger and your work experience better.
